CPR123 is the Tri-State area's largest training center for the American Heart Association and is the leading resource for emergency response training, AED program support and life-saving equipment. Since its inception in 2006, CPR123 has certified over 100,000 students in the various certification courses we offer, and we continue to grow.

We are a quality-driven, professional, reliable training center with knowledgeable instructors that engage the students while they instruct them. Feedback is always positive, students walk away with both the knowledge and skills necessary to successfully perform in any emergency situation.

Our distinctive approach to training maximizes the learning potential for both adult and adolescent learners. We structure our student's classroom time to obtain a level of understanding and proficiency needed for certification. Our courses use state-of-the-art equipment accompanied by hands-on exercises and lectures by American Heart Association instructors with over twenty years of field and teaching experience. We maintain the flexibility to accommodate our clients' needs whether at one of our New York-based training centers or on-site at our client's location.
